BEDFORD HISCHOOL TATTLER

Bedford Wins District Title
The Bedford basketball team won the championship of District 6 last week by defeating Troutville, Fincastle, Fairfield and Buchanan.

On Monday, February 24 Bedford played Troutville, and won 45 to 27. Approximately sixty rooters cheered Bedford to victory. High scorer was David Draper with twelve points.

On Wednesday, February 26, Bedford was victor over Fincastle 40 to 26 on the local court. Clyde Morgan scored 18 points.

Bedford went to Natural Bridge on Thursday, February 27 to play Fairfield, defeating them 42 to 26. Nineteen points for high score were made by Sherrill Coleman.

The final game of this group was played at Salem by Bedford and Buchanan, with Bedford winning 32 to 24. Sherrill Coleman scored 10 points. A bus-load of Bedford fans went along.

Individual scoring points this far are as follows: Clyde Morgan, 198; Sherrill Coleman, 159; David Draper, 126; Gamiel Draper, 94; Kyle Jones, 52; and all other, 32. Total points scored in the seven games played, which includes the four tournament games, are 661. In approximately two weeks the Bedford boys will go to Charlottesville to play in the State tournament.

Tests Arrive Again

Six weeks tests have arrived again, much to the chagrin of all concerned. The following is the schedule: Friday, March 7, English and Home Economics; Monday, March 10, History, General Science, Biology, Commercial Geography; Tuesday, March 11, Math, Industrial Arts, Typing, Bookkeeping, Shorthand; Wednesday, March 12, Latin, French, Chemistry, Physics, and Sociology.

Guest Speakers in Assembly
The assembly program on Thursday, February 27, was in charge of Mr. Thomas, since Mr. Borden was absent.

The Rev. J. T. Meadows was the guest speaker. His discussion was about growing up and accepting responsibilities. He rounded out his talk with many interesting illustrations.

Math Club Organized
The Math I-A class decided recently to organize a class club which meets every other Friday during the class hour. The following students were elected as officers of the club: E. L. Carwyle, president; Julia Dealey, vice-president and head of the program committee and Eunice Moore, secretary and treasurer.

The first meeting was held on February 21 with the president presiding. Julia Dealey presented a very interesting program in which class members took part.

Classes Study Drama
Miss Magann's third year English class have been making a study of the American drama. First, they read in class two one-act plays, the pupils taking the parts of the characters. After this, a report on current plays taken from a drama review in the New York Times was given by each student. Various lists of playwrights, plays, and motion pictures made from these plays were made.

One interesting project was a study of the stand of modern drama as regards democracy. Another was making up a list of the best plays since 1934, culminating with Robert Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night."

The purpose of this study is to give each student an understanding of what constitutes a good play, and a knowledge of some of the more important plays and authors in America today.

Convention Delegates Chosen
The Virginia Beta Club convention will be at the Hotel Roanoke, in Roanoke, on Friday and Saturday, March 7 and 8.

The Bedford High school chapter is sending two delegates, as well as other members. The delegates are Mary Lydia Lyle and Hannah Rusher. Others going include Phyllis Faribault, Anne Miller, Anne Johnson and Mr. Borden, the club sponsor.

Scribblers Choose Project
The Scribblers Club has planned to send some of its members' literary creations to the Beta Club Journal for publication. Since the comparison of these literary works with those in the Journal, the club has had high hopes of seeing its masterpieces in print.

Each member has chosen his best poem, and will enter this in a State contest of literary works written by school children. The goal of the club is to have some of its works published. Although this is a new organization with few members and fewer meetings to its credit, it hopes to soon be one of the most influential clubs in the school.

Hi Lights
The dental clinic, sponsored by the P. T. A. was held in high school Friday. This is a continuation of the work which has been finished in the work which has been finished in the elementary school. Dr. Lovelace has been unusually kind in doing the examining along with Mrs. Mitchell Bower and Mrs. Ray Harris.

Isabel Key visited relatives in Roanoke over the week-end.

James McKinney and Eleanor Meadows, students at Lynchburg College, were home for the week-end.

Edith Bornstein spent Sunday with Marguerette and Laura Lee Terry.

Anne Haggard visited her grandmother, Mrs. J. E. Bowman in Amherst, over the week-end.

Lucy Holland visited relatives in Roanoke Sunday.

Thomas Hicks was at his home over the week-end.

Among those who drove to Cave Mountain Lake over the week-end to skate were Hugh Kyle, Kyle Jones, John Scott, Mary Lydia Lyle, Anne Johnson, Boyd Clayton, Mary Stewart Gills, George Parker, June and Bob Scott. Thick, smooth ice which made good skating on the lake has drawn many skaters from miles around.

Lloyd Logwood will sing "My Redeemer and My Lord," at the Sunday morning hour.

At the special emergency offering taken last Sunday on the 150th anniversary of the death of John Wesley, an offering arising out of the acute-ness of the war situation, and which will go for relief and work around the training camps, the amount of $300 was raised and has been sent on, to begin its mission of service and love. This was far over the proportion asked of this charge, and but speaks of the wonderful manner in which the Bedford church answers these great calls. Surely everyone is glad that we did more than was asked of us.

SUNDAY, GOD'S DAY

"And Jesus came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." Luke 4:16.

In early times Christians were distinguished from unbelievers by the way they observed God's day. The same thing is true today. The Christian finds great delight in doing the will of God.

Some well meaning people say that it is better to go to a show on Sunday than to go to a road house or get drunk. That is true but it does not make desecrating the Sabbath right. It is better to steal from a man than to kill him, but it does not make stealing right.

Others think that because other cities are desecrating God's day we should too in order to keep that money here. That will not solve the problem. Other things being equal Bedford citizens should patronize Bedford merchants. Yet Bedford people go every day to other cities and go to movies and buy clothes, furniture, jewelry and food. If the shows in Bedford were opened on Sunday those who have no regard for God's day will still go to other cities to see shows on Sunday.

Shallow people make light of the Puritan observance of God's day, but they founded the greatest nation on earth because they honored God. Evil men destroyed Europe's Sabbath. Evil men are attempting to destroy our Sabbath and as they do, they like Samson, will pull down the pillars of civilization.

"Remember the Sabbath, to keep it holy. Six days shall thou labor, and do thy work. But the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; therefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it." (Made it holy.) Exodus 20: 8-11.—HARRY P. CLAUSE

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of dear husband and father, John Will Kessler who departed this life five years ago today, March 9, 1936.

March brings sad memories

Of a loved one gone to rest;

You will always be remembered

By those who loved you best.

Dear husband and father you are not forgotten

Though on earth you are no more

Still in memory you are with us

As you always were before.

One afternoon just at evening break

He had a whispered call

God had sent an angel

To take him from us all.

Deep in our hearts is a picture

Of a husband and father at rest;

In memory's frame we will keep it

Because we know it is the best.

Our life has never been the same

Our home is lonely still

We sometimes cannot understand

Why such should be God's will.

Ah! 'tis lonesome here without you

God in Heaven only knows

How we miss you, dearest one

No one else will ever know.

Just when life was brightest

Just when your years were best

You were called from this sad world

To a home of Eternal Rest.

Sleep on, sleep on, dear Daddy

Till our short lives pass away;

Then we'll come and rest beside you

Until the resurrection Day.

By his wife and daughter, Mrs. J. W. Kessler and Leah.

WE MUST LOOK AHEAD

In the "Printer's Devil" column in this issue of the Bulletin will be found another letter from John Mitchell, formerly of Bedford, but now residing in Summit, N. J. Mr. Mitchell is apposed to the British aid bill now pending in congress, and, as in a previous letter attempts to justify that opposition; and, like most of the opponents of that measure, accuses its supporters of resorting to deceptive tactics to put it over. We shall, of course ignore this last feature of Mr. Mitchell's communication and discuss the proposed American Aid to Britain on its merits as we understand them.

The trouble with Mr. Mitchell is that he takes a narrow, short-sighted view of the situation now obtaining in the world—considers only the immediate present. All his thought is centered on keeping the United States out of the war, paying no regard to the calamitous price this country must pay in the future should Britain fall and the entire old world come under domination of the three aggressor nations—Germany, Italy and Japan. The dictator rulers of those countries have not only enslaved their own people, robbed them of their freedom, but have already brought even a worse state of bondage to the people of adjoining states. It seems perfectly clear to us that should Britain also be conquered the United States, the only free country left, would face existence in an intolerable world.

Regardless of what the cost may be in men, money and sacrifice, America cannot allow the dictator powers to gain control of the old world. Germany and her allies must be defeated, if the future of the United States is to be made—and kept—secure. That is the situation as we see it, and it will be suicidal for this country to stand on the sidelines and wait to see what will happen, juggling ourselves in the delusion that we have no stake in the outcome of this war. Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Hungary, Rumania, and now Bulgaria, adopted this waiting, hoping attitude, and they are all now under the heels of the conqueror.

We do not want that to happen to our own country, and it is our honest, studied conviction that our one and only hope of maintaining the freedom and personal liberty we have always known lies in the adoption of whatever course may be necessary to insure defeat of the aggressor powers. Because we believe that our own security, both for the present and the future, depends on what we do now to meet the crisis, we favor giving Britain every aid she needs to bring about the defeat of Hitler and all his monstrous plans for making Germany master of the world.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS SOUND OFF

The Young Democrats, like all others interested in politics, have been very quiet recently, recuperating, no doubt, from the presidential election campaign. Last Thursday night, however, they came to life again and elected their officers for the year, as well as outlined a tentative program.

We are glad to see that the organization is still functioning. It seems to us that if ever there was a time for Young Democracy to take hold and show a sustained interest in government, it is at present. This applies not only to Young Democrats, but to Young Republicans as well. With the world situation what it is and totalitarianism rampant in other nations and insidious undercover work being done here to undermine our democratic form of government, it well behooves our youth to snap to attention and show some zeal and interest in preserving the liberty that we have. Since Bedford county is predominantly democratic, we know of no better medium through which the fostering of such interest could be obtained than through the county Young Democratic club.

It is of particular interest, therefore, that we noted that both the retiring president, duVal Radford, and the newly elected president, J. D. S. Morgan, laid stress on the fact that the registration of voters and getting people to pay their pole taxes would be the main project of the club during the coming year. There being no elections in which the club will have to take part, more time can be devoted to these activities this year. (The gubernatorial and county elections are counted out, since the club can take no part in primary elections.)

Some work has already been done along these lines. We realize that getting the people of Bedford county to register and vote is slow work and a hard task. If, however, the club succeeds in awakening even a portion of the people to their responsibilities to their government, they will have accomplished much for the good of their county, state and nation.

A REAL CAMPAIGN NEEDED

After several delays, caused, we are told, by the recent flu epidemic which piled so much work on the local physicians that they were unable to begin a new project, a definite date has been set for the opening of Bedford's venereal disease clinic, sponsored by the Lion's club. On March 20, the first treatments will be given and this date, we think, should be considered a red letter day on the county's health calendar. It is definitely one of the most progressive steps to be taken since the establishment of annual clinics here for the diagnosis of tuberculosis.

Since this is a new project in the county, the development of policy in relation to it will necessarily be a new one. As we have stated before, since local physicians will have to bear the brunt of the work and the real responsibility involved in giving treatments, the manner in which the clinic is run should be left to them. We feel that the procedure of having patients referred by the doctors for treatment is sound and we realize that precautions have to be taken to insure that these men who have so magnanimously consented to donate their time and skill will not suffer any loss thereby.

There is one practice, however, that we hope will be adopted in due time as a matter of policy by the doctors and that is the giving of free Wassermann tests at the clinic without the routine of having a referral. It seems to us that only by giving tests whole sale in this manner will syphilis ever be tracked down and eradicated. This does not mean, however, that all patients receiving Wassermanns should be treated at the clinic. On the contrary if patients are found to be in need of treatment, they could be sent to their physicians who would decide whether or not they should be referred to the clinic for such treatments. In this way, the final decision of free treatment would still be in the hands of the doctors.

It is possible that some tests would be given to those who are able to pay and that the doctors would lose thereby. We believe, however, that the additional cases which would be unearthed and sent to the doctors for treatment would more than balance such a loss. Then, too, it should be taken into consideration that relatively few people who can afford to pay for a blood test, and who would go to the physician to have one, would come to the clinic.

It is our sincere conviction that only in this way can we ever get at the root of the evil. Only when it is made easy for people to have blood tests will they have this done in large numbers, regardless of their ability to pay. Only when tests are done wholesale will there be a chance of stamping out syphilis. We would like to see a campaign inaugurated whereby everyone in town and county would feel impelled to have a Wassermann taken. Since treatments would be given only to the indigent, and any other cases uncovered would be referred to the doctors, we feel confident that the practice of our physicians would be increased rather than otherwise.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE BATTING SOUTH

Post reporters who travelled through the Southern States recently have reported that the sentiment of the people there is violently for administering a sound thrashing to Hitler's Germany in one way or another.

They contend that this is our war.

The young Southerners pouring into the training camps are drilling with a vehemence which is remarkable to the instructors.

Some of them, from the very backward and remote communities, were surprised when they were told that the United States is not already at war.

The elected Representatives of some of the Southern States are in the forefront of the interventionist movement.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, advocates outright declaration of war. Senator Pepper, of Florida, has been pounding the war drums in the Senate for two years.

Our friends from New Orleans, currently in our midst for the Sugar Bowl presentation, say that settled, urban New Orleans is not apparently pro-war, but the folks in the back parishes of Louisiana are pro-war.

Some of the speeches of Southern Congressmen, if followed, would have us charging right into the fray.

This attitude is greatly at variance with that in other sections. New England does not want war. Close to Canada and closest to England, it recognizes aid to Britain as a tactical advantage, but resists entering the imperial struggle.

The Eastern seaboard as far as the Potomac exhibits only in some high and exposed spots, such as the heads of universities, the willingness to take up war as a remedy in the present situation.

The Middle West is shying away rapidly from the interventionists. Senator Taft, of Ohio, through his temperate attitude, is attracting much support, while, it is reported, the stand of Wendell Willkie is dissatisfying to his former admirers.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, though a master of bombast, probably has the feelings of the people of the Far West well estimated, for he is a political opportunist of the first water.

Thus we can fairly well judge that his general territory is against participation in the war.

On the West Coast we have Senator Johnson, of California, standing as the apostle of isolationism. His influence and his political presence in that section are great.

Thus, according to this method of deduction, which might be right or wrong, according to further information, it might be said that old Dixie is still the battling South.

Of course one section of America at this late date could hardly bring about a war. But if its Representatives in Congress are preponderantly belligerent, then a war vote would get plenty of support from this bloc.—Boston Post.

FARMYARD METHUSELAHS

Current headlines in the news of the animal world are a hen and a cow, each 22 years old. In the hen's case, fate decreed she had to die to gain a headline. The cow still is going strong, with more than 4,000 direct descendants. In 1919 Samuel D. Colburn, of Northfield, Massachusetts, drove some frolicsome dogs away from a baby chick and nursed it back to health and vigor. As it grew and its brothers and sisters progressively went to pot or the frying pan, the one which had threatened to go to the dogs was spared and encouraged to live a healthy hen's full and rounded life. Pip and rump threatened, but "the Little Old Lady" weathered both. It was age that laid her low. Men who claim knowledge of poultry say that a hen surviving twelve winters is a rare bird.

The Foremost Guernsey Association at Emmadine Farm near Hopewell Junction, New York, was showered with congratulatory telegrams and greeting cards when Mixer Faithful attained the age of 22, thus establishing her as the oldest registered Guernsey cow in the world. Twice declared a Grand Champion, mother of ten healthy sons and six prolific daughters, all of which have lived up to the best traditions of the Faithful family, she can afford to hold her head high as matriarch of the Foremost Guernsey Blueblood establishment in only slightly less glamorous fashion than Elsie of World's Fair and Hollywood fame wears her honors as the queen of the clan Jersey. There used to be a saying among New England farmers that a 16-year-old cow was worth more in the glue pot than in the stanchion.

Maybe the animals have gone in for The More Abundant Life.—New York Sun.

REPUBLICANS AND THE WAR

(Princeton Observer)

From what we can learn from all inside sources the present administration is determined to enter the European war.

The fly in the ointment is that 85 per cent of the American public is opposed to our entry into the war—and 95 per cent of the Republicans are opposed to it. Probably 80 per cent of the Republicans are complete isolationists. That has been the policy of the Republican party for the last generation.

If aid to Britain were all that were asked in the way of materials probably the majority of the American public would go along. But we know that this is but a stepping stone—that America's participation in the war with navy, planes and troops is the goal finally desired.

If England is successful this summer and Germany meets with reverses—then for final victory it will be necessary to place an army in Europe—and then is when the American army is expected to take its part.

It is the Republican party's point of view that no stakes that this country has in the European war are high enough to warrant our participation—just as is the general point of view of the public at present.

And it is up to the Republicans to oppose every additional step—after this aid to Britain bill is passed—to get us into this war—not because we are hostile to Britain—all of us hope that Britain will win—but we are opposed to our participation in another European war, and the possible loss of half a million American lives—that will surely follow.

MUST BE READY

The time for this has not yet come. But it may come, and it is not alarmist in Mrs. Roosevelt to suggest that we begin getting into the mental frame of mind to ride with it if it comes.

In general, we have felt sure, in the United States, that we could have both guns and butter. The industrial resources of the country are so great that, in general, this should be true. But there may be exceptions. Aluminum, for instance. Suppose the pressure for planes and more planes rises, and there is a shortage of aluminum, so that it can't be used for cooking utensils. When the government points out the need, we should be ready to postpone buying such materials, laying aside the money instead to buy them after the emergency is passed. Then every such purchase will help to ease the strain of transfer back to peacetime production.

As to stocks of goods on hand, this does not, of course, apply. It may never apply. But it is just as well to face possibilities and be prepared to make them work for us, not against us.—Bay City Times.

What the Balkans need is a steadily growing list of highway detours from Germany to all points south-east.—Indianapolis Star.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I have at hand a letter from Mr. John Mitchell, of Summit, N. J., in which he answers the question put to him in this column recently—"What if Britain should fall?" He also goes into a further explanation of his stand on the question of the policy of the United States in regard to Britain and the war abroad.

"Although no one knows what will happen if Britain falls, I suspect that such an eventuality which I don't think likely, would bring Canada and all other English possessions in and adjacent to North and South America under the United States flag. This would make US impregnable even if the Japs, Russians and Germans and Italians should then combine against US.

"I had rather contemplate what would happen if America fails in saving Britain after giving her our navy, army and 'all out' material resources.

"British propaganda has had its effect in this country, so that many are thinking first of Britain instead of America First.

"The New York Times is no longer the Bible of newspaper men. It is no longer the New York Times, of Adolph S. Ochs. It is now a propaganda sheet for British interests, it seems to me, like the Herald-Tribune, whose ownership is connected with the British ruling class.

"The New York Times actually refuses to publish letters opposing our entrance into this war while it publishes letters urging such a step.

"If there is anyone who would sacrifice 1,000,000 American lives to save Britain I say that person is more pro-British than pro-American.

"I detest the propagandist, who has no son or brother who would be sacrificed, yet tries to stamper this country into war on the hypocritical cry that we must go in to preserve the American way. America has preserved the American way ALONE—except during a few New Deal spasms—for 165 years. We can continue to do so. We have everything necessary to the American Way of life in the Western Hemisphere. Shame on the holly-coddles who think we must always lean upon the British Empire. What's happened to the spirit of America which in the past has overcome all obstacles. There's no foreign trade that we may sacrifice that will give back, or compensate for, the life of one fine American boy dying in Europe. Don't be misled. Lend-Lease is a tragic hoax for it hoodwinks Americans to believe that it is a means of preventing our entrance into the war when it is possibly the final step into it.

"I cannot understand the sentiment of some Southerners. What do they think Britain would do for us if the tables were reversed? She would let us down, if she thought it would be better for her own selfish interests, just as she let down our beloved Confederacy.

"I am enclosing an editorial from the Princeton Observer, written by a former Bedford boy, who, like myself, answered the call in the World War. Many will remember Kyle McCormick, high-minded and patriotic. Why don't you reprint editorials such as the enclosed instead of those from the pens of warmongers, most of whom would sacrifice NOTHING if they did get us into the war? At least print both sides of every controversy.

Sincerely,

JOHN MITCHELL

That is exactly what I am trying to do, Mr. Mitchell—print both sides of the question. As I've stated before, just because the Bulletin does not agree with you, is no reason that we should not respect your right to have a different opinion. After all no one really knows. Please note that we have also reprinted the editorial which you enclosed.

Neither your letter nor the editorial, however, has changed my opinion that our best bet to keep out of the war is to lend, lease or give Britain all the supplies we can. I do not think that what Britain would do for us enters into the picture at all. It is not for Britain's good that we urge aid to Britain, but for our own.

Yours truly,

PRINTER'S DEVIL

ATTACK ON AMERICA

BY GENERAL FLAGG WHITE

THE STORY SO FAR: Intelligence Officer Benning's warning that 200,000 foreign troops were poised in Mexico for an attack on the United States caused grave concern in army headquarters, but the people branded the statement as "war mongering." Four large southern cities were suddenly attacked from the air.

As Boll's eye went back into the air, his mind was lifted suddenly out of the depths of black despair by a joyous miracle of development. Those new planes were closing in and he made out by the shape of wings and fuselage that they were not Van Hassek planes.

Boll's hand flashed out to his field-glasses. He glued them to the skies. From under the wings of those rushing squadrons flashed the glorious legend "U. S. Army."

American planes plummeted down. Van Hassek's hornets now were dropping about in a luffery circle awaiting the developments of attack. In a twinkling the American birdmen projected an audacious assault. Planes circled, dove, rolled, darted in the throes of combat. A plane came whistling down. Boll's jaw tightened as he saw the first casualty was an American plane. But quickly two of Van Hassek's birdmen came tumbling out of the sky.

If the Van Hassek pilots had stalled for reinforcements, they now decided upon precipitate flight against superior number. Another Van Hassek plane went down. In a minute the cloud of darting falcons passed into the distance behind.

A noon sun was burning the baked hills and swales when Boll's survivors rolled in on a Second Division outpost south of Kin. Boll's cheek, caked in blood, was throbbing with pain, his right arm hung stiff and useless at his side. He climbed from the truck and stolidly checked his command as it came through the outpost. Forty-two moaned in the throes of wounds, twenty-nine had been left dead along the crimson road from Laredo.

The outpost commander came hurrying up.

"Sorry to report in with my command shot to pieces like this, Colonel," Boll reported in grim dejection. "But the only choice was—capture. Where's the hospital, sir? My wounded must have care at once!"

"Eleventh's men are being evacuated to San Antonio, Captain," the outpost commander advised. "Colonel Denn was killed, total casualties over three hundred men. But maybe that's not too bad when you consider our border cavalry was all gobbled up. The Twelfth and Fifth are still fighting it out, but they haven't any more chance than Custer had. From all reconnaissance reports, we'll be attacked in force here before many hours pass. All right, Boll, get rolling."

CHAPTER IX

In Washington, Captain Benning spent a sleepless nightmare of a night on the assignment from Flagwill of observing panic-stricken streets.

Daybreak and exhaustion restored some degree of reason. People moved about now as if stunned, but from time to time looking fearfully into the skies or straining at every word of radio loudspeakers that had been put in service on principal streets.

Traffic jams finally had been reduced, steady streams of cabs and cars were pouring out of the city on all roads. Thousands flocked about the railway station clamoring for standing space on any train that led away from Washington.

Extra editions of newspapers burst into the streets at frequent intervals.

Texas invaded. Extras massed black headlines over meager dispatches from San Antonio. Van Hassek was moving north in three columns. American infantry and cavalry were fighting him at the Rio Grande. American Second Division was moving south to repel the invasion.

Another extra dashed out. Washington safe Benning read eagerly. It had been as Flagwill guessed. The night raiders had planted a re-fueling field. Back of the Tennessee River, southwest from Nashville. The thing had been camouflaged as a new airways enterprise, had even been fostered by ambitious and unsuspecting chambers of commerce.

When the bombers and their convoys of fighting craft had put down to fill their tanks after bombing Washington, a few mounted machine guns had kept curious natives away. The aircraft had taken all personnel off at resuming their flight back to Mexico. Another raid on Washington would be impossible—unless attack could be launched from the sea.

the air; Washington was bombed and the President killed. General Brill, commander of the army in Texas, reported to General Hague at Washington that he was opposed by greatly superior forces. General Hague told him to resist the enemy's advance at all costs. Brill ordered Captain Boll to lead the 11th U. S.

flung network of small garrisons whose location had been dictated by chambers of commerce and congressmen rather than by the necessities of military training in the vital team-play of larger units.

Plans were being laid for a call for 500,000 volunteers. That would have to wait action by Congress, but Congress could be depended upon now to go the limit. A draft army of a million men would come next.

As for modern equipment, that would have to wait. There would be no such thing as buying it in France and England, even in Canada, as at the time of the World War. A year, or two years, might elapse before industrial mobilization the country's own resources, could Infantry into position for battle. Boll's motor column bravely withstood a terrible strafing from enemy aircraft, but he ordered the men to abandon their trucks when he observed twenty more planes approaching. Further resistance seemed useless to him.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

General Mole sat in the hot shelter of his command post which had been dug by engineers into the reverse slope of a squat ridge. He puffed glumly at the stub of a cigar as he observed the arrival of his regimental and battalion commanders whom he had summoned from over his battle position.

Planes soared overhead, American combat planes covering his position against air attack. From time to time an observation plane dashed low with a dropped message reporting progress of the Van Hassek approach. At last word, the main Van Hassek column had cleared the Nueces River after routing a motorized battalion strong-point that Mole had sent out to gain contact and delay the enemy.

Mole's plan of battle was shaped; his formal orders had been distributed. Since morning the men had been digging in.

All his artillery had been dug in and camouflaged. Here he had an immense, hastily organized citadel of mutually supporting strong-points. Machine guns had been placed for the maximum of destructive effect. The breaking of one line yielded the enemy the grim necessity of attacking a new one. Roads menacing his flanks were strongly covered. It was not such a position as he would have selected of his own choice, but since necessity forced it on him, he meant to make the most of his opportunities for stubborn resistance.

His senior aide-de-camp came up to him and saluted.

"Sir, the officers are assembled," the captain advised.

There was a greenish hue to the general's lean, cadaverous face, brought by the stress of the past few days. His eyes were bloodshot under puffy black lids, but they shone with a stout, even glitter, that proclaimed the mastery of will over flesh. As he stood up to face his assembled commanders, he was perfectly contained.

"I wanted a few words with you before we go into action, gentlemen," he began in a calm voice. "The decision to fight here was made for us by General Hague. Therefore, it becomes our decision. Let me frankly say that the Army is on the spot, that the people wouldn't understand the simple wisdom of our falling back without a fight."

He paused and his pale, bluish lips drew down into an expression of bitterness.

"All right, we'll go through! We'll hold! We'll give the country a new tradition to remember! We'll fight Van Hassek with one regiment to four or five! If we're attacked this afternoon we'll fight until night. We'll hold through tomorrow. Then I'll make my further decision. When the time comes I'll give the order for withdrawal which must be by night."

General Mole paused again to look about among them and then spoke in slow, biting words.

"Gentlemen, a final word! I'll show the country what our mettle is. We'll show the enemy what they can expect to meet once our armies are mobilized and organized and trained. Remember this, if we lost every last man in the Second Division, our losses would still be only a fraction of what the good old Second and Tenth, France, even if nobody remembers that fact but the Second's survivors!"

His voice rose to a furious intensity and his clenched hand rose above his head.

"A new Alamo to remember, gentlemen! That's what we'll give the country—a new Alamo to remember! Put that thought into the teeth of your men. That's all!"

Pork Shoulder Steaks

It's a smart homemaker who gets up on her toes these days and looks market-wise. One of the most worthwhile buys she'll notice right away is pork shoulder steaks—not only delicious, but thrifty, too. They look mighty good when served, nicely browned and garnished with glazed apple slices topped with a ball of bright red cranberry jelly as you see them above.

Pork shoulder steaks are, logically enough, cut from the shoulder of pork. Here are several ways to identify this attractive cut of meat and point out that the bones in pork shoulder steaks may be of two shapes, as seen in the picture. The long narrow bone is found when the steaks are cut from the side nearest the ribs, while the round bone is found when the steaks are cut from the "arm side" of the shoulder. The steaks are oval at one end and rather squared off at the other.

Pork shoulder steaks are sometimes called pork shoulder chops. They are meaty and both tender and delicious when properly cooked. Braising is the best method for cooking.

Braised Pork Shoulder Steaks

Season steaks with salt and pepper; dredge with flour if desired. Brown on all sides in hot fat. The fat may be that which melts out of the meat or it may be added.

When the steaks are well browned, cover and let cook slowly until done. This will take about forty-five minutes for steaks three-quarters of an inch thick. It may be necessary to add a small amount of water to the steaks, depending upon the amount of fat in the pan.

Variety in Shoulder Steaks

A cup of tomatoes seasoned with a tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and several onion slices added to the steaks after they're browned and before they are covered, adds variety in the Spanish fashion.

Pork shoulder steaks are but one of the many examples of meat that are adapted to fit a tight-laced budget. There is actually a cut of meat to fit every purse. Scout around in your market the next time you make a visit and treat yourself to economy.

March Economy

March is a deadline month. Winter goes under the deadline, taxes are due, the wardrobe has that off-season look—but why go further? Every homemaker knows there are clamps on her budget.

We point out that food chosen wisely can be chosen economically without sacrificing the tastiness of a meal, its attractiveness, or any of its value as food.

A secret of keeping economy meals nutritionally sound is to plan them as you do all other meals—with meat as the center. Many cuts of meat fit an economy budget. While low in price they are still high in food value, and a boost to the palatability of the meal.

Most economical cuts of meat may not be the most familiar. In fact, because they are less-known and therefore less-demanded, they are more economically priced. A thrifty homemaker takes advantage of this law of supply and demand and makes the less-demanded cuts into delicious meals for her family.

The polka dot has expanded. This new coin dot is fashion's latest and is destined to pass the polka dot in popularity. In this fashion of the week the coin dot has been beautifully converted into an eye-catching color duet. An ingenious arrangement of the two tones creates a miracle in figure flattery. Note the effect the light panel, covering the shoulders and parading down front, has on one's hips and waist. The two side panels, scalloped on the bodice, plus the sleeves and the back, are of the darker color. A self-halt ties about the waist and a gardenia nestles on the collar. The color schemes are all important. This one is worn by Miss Kent in a combination of earth brown and beige. It also makes up beautifully in blue—a sky blue with navy.

Farm, 4-Hand H.D. Club Notes

INFORMATION ON

1941 AAA PROGRAM

Use of the individual farm plan sheet in planning farm operations will enable Bedford County farmers to obtain the greatest benefit from their participation in the 1941 AAA Farm program, according to William R. Walker, chairman of the county AAA committee.

April 15 is the final date when a farmer may fill out the farm plan and indicate his intention to participate in the 1941 program. The farm plan, a copy of which will be furnished the farmer, contains valuable information regarding the maximum payment for the farm soil-building practices, and classification of crops. In working out his farm plan sheet, each farmer may have the help of a local AAA committeeman or representative of the county committee. The farmer and a committeeman may discuss how the farmer can use the maximum assistance available in order to carry out the soil-building practices most needed on the farm. Taking into account farm allotments, rates of payments, and other factors, the farmer can plan his operations in such a way as to make the greatest use of good farm management principles. Through personal contact with the committee, farmers may also become better acquainted with new provisions of the 1941 program. The committeemen are informed on these provisions.

FAT HOG SHOW TO BE HELD AT SALEM

The fourth annual show of fat hogs for Montgomery, Polaski, Floyd, Roanoke, Bedford, Botetourt, Franklin, Giles, and Craig counties will be held at the stock yards of the Neuhoff Packing Company, Salem, early in September.

This show, says G. C. Herring, animal husbandman, Virginia Agricultural Extension Division, has done much to stimulate interest in better feeding, breeding and management methods in pork production, both among 4-H club members and commercial pork producers in the Roanoke area.

Liberal prizes are offered both in the 4-H club and open classes. In the former a total of $200 is offered, providing there are as many as 50 exhibitors of pens-of-three pigs. If less than this number, the total amount of prizes may be scaled down accordingly. Club members should use March pigs and get them on feed around May 15.

The open class is for litters of 8 or more pigs farrowed between February 15 and April 15. A total of $200 is likewise offered for this class, providing there are 20 entries on exhibit. Litters are judged largely on market type, finish and uniformity. Entries should be made through county agents within two weeks after litters are farrowed.

Due to low prices of hogs in 1940, the show was not as large as the previous year when about 200 hogs were on exhibit. However, with much better prospects for favorable prices at the time of this year's show than existed last year, interest in feeding hogs or litters should be much greater.

For information regarding the show may be obtained from county agents of the counties mentioned.

NEW PHOSPHATE RECEIVED FOR DEMONSTRATION HERE

A 34-ton shipment of metaphos, TVA's phosphate fertilizer of new high concentration, has been received at Bedford for use by test-demonstration farmers, Bedford County Soil Service, Extension Division, announced today. The Association and the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service manage the test-demonstration program through the county agent's office.

Metaphos, known chemically as calcium metaphosphate, is of higher analysis than any phosphate fertilizer in common use by farmers. It contains over 60 per cent available phosphate plant food, whereas the usual phosphate carries 16 to 20 per cent. The Association also received 29 tons of superphosphate, a 47 per cent material.

W. W. Turner, assistant county agent, explained that application of phosphate, with lime, is nearly always necessary for satisfactory growth of soil building crops. The demonstration is the county agent's only such water and soil-holding crops. In addition, they adjust their whole farming system, as is made possible by the phosphate, toward a more successful and enduring agriculture.

Neighbors, who select the demonstration farms, the county agent continues, are advised when while changes are being made and adapt new practices to their own farms. Results are judged by check plots, from records and by the visual effect of the phosphate on crops, livestock, the farm and home unit, and the community.

Since the test-demonstrators are rendering a public service, they pay for the phosphate only freight charges from Wilson Dam, Ala., location of the Tennessee Valley Authority's experimental Fertilizer Works. They also bear all other costs of changes incurred in their farm reorganization.

There are 24 test-demonstration farms in the county. The present shipment is for the following: E. R. Burks, Big Island; P. M. Chaffin, R. F. D. 2, Forest; W. A. Holland, R. F. D. 4, Bedford; G. W. Moulton, R. F. D. 3, Bedford; J. B. Dooley, R. F. D. 1, Vinton; County Farm, C. H. Spradlin, Superintendent, Bedford; E. T. Garaghty, Bellevue; Robert L. Trent, Forest; Floyd A. Turner, R. F. D. 1, Huddleston and William Garrett, Morale.

The phosphate test-demonstration activity here is a part of a national program of farmers participating with their Agricultural Extension Services in 24 states and with the Tennessee Valley Authority. Throughout the country, there are 30,000 test-demonstrators in 650 counties.

Two hundred and twenty-two tons of phosphate has already been used by the Bedford demonstrators, and approximately 1,425 acres of pasture and cropland improved. From farm records kept for the past three years, it was proved that by the use of phosphate and lime, crop yields have been increased, pastures have been improved, making it possible both to increase and improve their livestock. Prior to the TVA program, only one of these improvements had been made by the demonstrators. In talking with the demonstrators, it is estimated that approximately 20 per cent of the steeper cropland has been taken out of cultivated crops and established in permanent pasture. Crop rotations have been established, and shorter rotations have made it easier to build up cropland and furnish additional pasture. Several of these farmers are following strip cropping as a means of water and soil conservation.

Bridget O'Flannagan, a wild Irish rose, and Louis Cattaro, a temperamental Italian, come in reply to the letters but are much surprised to find that the pictures inclosed are not those of Ma and Pappy, but of Emmy and Luke.

Sol Silverstein, a Hebrew manager, scouts through the Ozarks looking for hillbilly songbirds to sing on the radio with Lulu and Seaside Triffett whom he has been managing for a year.

Is it correct? If you are in doubt, ask any member of the fifth grade.
