Stonewall Jackson praised

Gen. Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson was described as "a man of tremendous principle, a great Christian and an unparalleled military strategist" in a talk to members of the Old Dominion Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at the annual Lee-Jackson-Maury luncheon Saturday at the Stewart Arms Hotel.

The Rev. Elwood McQuaid, pastor of Timberlake Baptist Church, was guest speaker. He has made a study of the life of General Jackson and had permission to read papers and old family Bibles of the beloved general at his home in Lexington. He quoted from verses the general had marked. McQuaid brought out Jackson's devotion to duty, his consideration of people of all walks of life and the importance of prayer and self-denial in General Jackson's life.

Quoting the inscription by Field Marshal Viscount G. J. Wolseley on Jackson's tomb in Lexington, the speaker said: "The name of Stonewall Jackson is no longer the exclusive property of Virginia and the South, it has become the birthright of every man privileged to call himself an American."

The speaker was introduced by Katharine Gilbert, chapter historian. McQuaid is a native of Belleville, Mich. He attended Bob Jones University in Greenville, S. C., and the University of Arkansas. The clergyman came to Lynchburg in 1962 to assume his duties as pastor of Timberlake Baptist Church. Before coming to Lynchburg he has served pastorates in Bedford County and in Chicago, Ill. He is the founder and president of Timberlake Christian Schools and is a member of the executive committee of the Caribbean Christian Deaf Center in Mandeville, Jamaica.

Ruth Burgess, chapter president, presided and welcomed guests who included Mrs. McQuaid and Mrs. McDonald McIlwaine, president of the Kirkwood Otey Chapter of the UDC.

Mrs. John H. Davis, past president of the chapter, was in charge of reservations for the luncheon and in charge of the event were Mrs. D. W. Cheatnam and Mrs. W. Cabell Burgess Jr.

A program of music was given by Franklin Woolard, vocalist, musical and educational director of Beulah Baptist Church, and Mrs. Mildred H. Dennis, accompanist, who is organist at Beulah Baptist Church.

LEE AND JACKSON

"Stonewall" Jackson's Home

8 East Washington Street, Lexington, Virginia

This modest home, the only one ever owned by General Jackson, is a National Shrine to this great American. Here, steeped in Civil War history, the visitor may see the largest collection of Jackson relics in existence — his personal belongings, his furniture, old prints, oil paintings and photographs and many other items. Nearby is Virginia Military Institute, Lee's Tomb, Jackson's grave and the beautiful monument to him, Washington and Lee University and the Lee Museum.

Historic Lexington is indeed the "Valhalla of the South." (Natural Bridge, one of the wonders of America, is only 13 miles to the south on a superb highway.)

"Stonewall" Jackson's Winchester Headquarters
415 North Braddock St., Winchester, Virginia

Within these revered walls, Jackson lived and worked and planned from November 1861 to March 1862. Here conferred Ashby, Dabney, McGuire and Preston and other great Civil War Generals. Here plans were laid for the internationally famous Shenandoah Valley Campaign. Many Civil War pieces belonging to Jackson are here.

Part of the headquarters is given over to a gift shop where many items may be purchased: books, flags, cards, pamphlets, slides and many other items of historical interest.

Parking along Braddock Street is permitted and found easily. There is a modest admission charge.

Though not yet open to the public, this modest four room home has been completely restored to its original condition. Eight miles from Powhatan Courthouse, west on U. S. 60, it is hoped that this shrine will be opened late in the summer of 1972. Here the great, revered leader retired with his family to live quietly "like I feel that my people will have to live" following the surrender of April 7th, 1865.

It is from this hallowed ground that he was called to accept the Presidency of Washington College, which, following his death, was to be called Washington and Lee.

Admission will be free.

The Old Dominion Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. R. Barringer at 1627 Langhorne Road. The A. P. Hill Circle, of which Mrs. Barringer is chairman, was hostess for the social hour which preceded the business meeting.

Miss Ruth B. Burgess, president, conducted the business meeting.

Mrs. W. R. Canada, a member of the chapter, presented a program on General Wade Hampton. She told of Hampton's life from his boyhood days at "Millwood" the family plantation near Columbia S. C. throughout his entire life. She said that although he was a conservative and did not favor secession he gave himself and his considerable resources to the Confederacy.

Hampton was wounded five times during the war and rose from an infantry officer in the Hampton Legion, made up of men who volunteered to serve under him, to Lieutenant General. He was one of the two southern calvary chiefs to attain that rank.

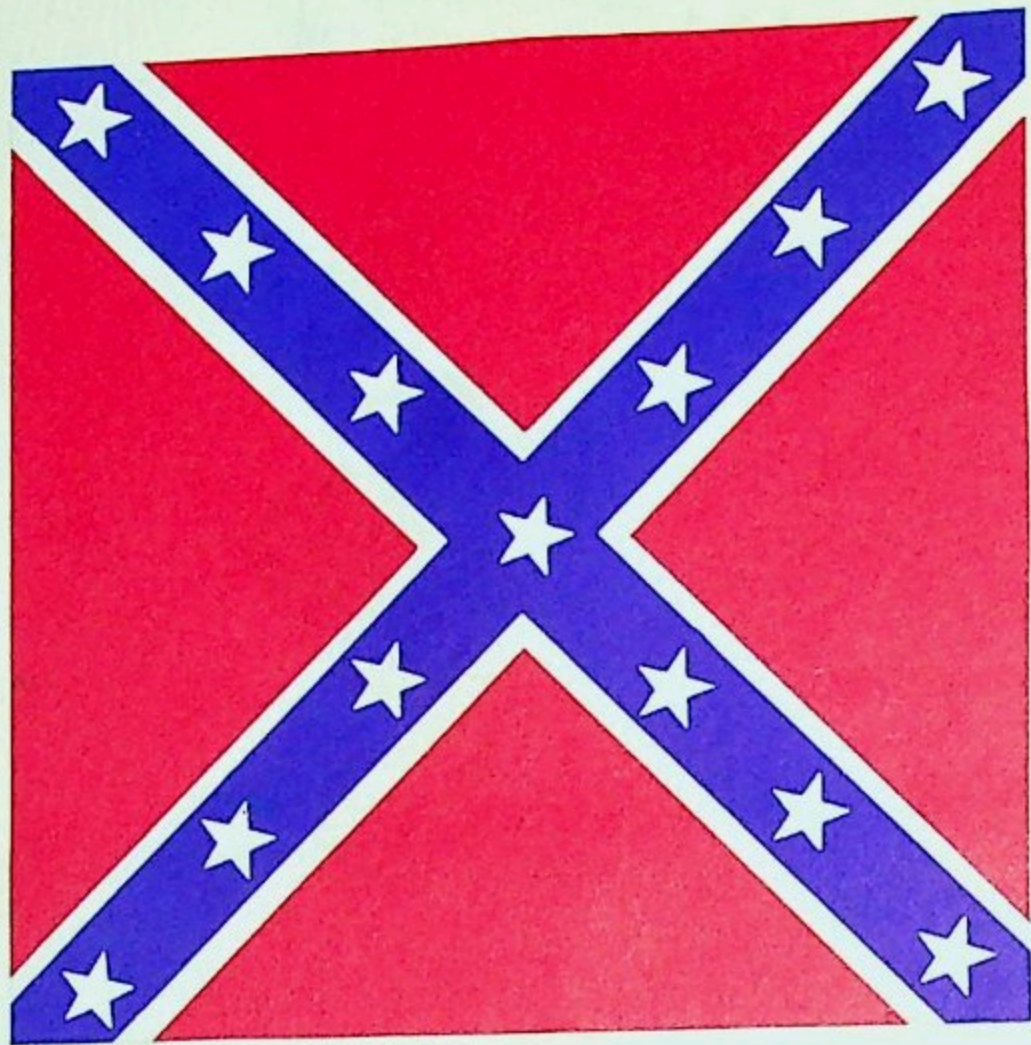

In the last days of the war he was ordered to return to Columbia and watched as Sherman's men destroyed the city. He conducted delaying actions against Sherman through South Carolina and North Carolina to cover Johnson's retreat.

Mrs. Canada related his career after the war and said he served as governor of South Carolina for two terms and then went on to the U. S. Senate, where he served until 1890. Hampton, a symbol of the South Carolina conservative regime, was defeated in 1890 by Pitchfork Ben Tillman, who represented the farmer and artisan strata of society.

One of South Carolina's greatest sons, Mrs. Canada said Hampton died at 84 and his last words uttered were "God bless all of my people, black and white."

Generals' Postwar Lives Revealed At UDC Meet

The Old Dominion Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. A. Sidney Nowlin at 2401 Rivermont Avenue with Mrs. Nowlin and her daughter, Mrs. Harry Rucker of Amherst County as hostesses. Mrs. John H. Davis, first vice president, conducted the business meeting.

Mrs. Fred C. McDowell presented the program, with a talk on Confederate Military Leaders after the Surrender.

Mrs. McDowell told of General Lee taking the lead in advising Confederates to stay at home, build back the country and bury animosity. He set the example by accepting the presidency of Washington College, and putting that school in excellent order, leading the youth of the South in paths of honor.

His nephew, General Fitzhugh Lee, went to farming after the surrender, turning to politics later. He was Governor of Virginia from 1885 to 1890 and then was appointed Consul General to Havana, 1896-1898, was made Major General of Volunteers May 1898 and, as such, fought in the Spanish-American War.

General George Pickett was offered the post of brigadier general of his army by the Khedive of Egypt as well as marshalship of the State of Virginia by General Grant. He turned down these offers and worked as general agent for the Washington Life Insurance Co. of New York in Virginia.

Among other leaders who pursued political careers was General Wade Hampton who was elected governor of South Carolina in 1876. After two terms as governor he was elected to the United States Senate where he served until 1890.

General John B. Gordon was elected Governor of Georgia and served in that capacity from 1886 to 1890. He was then elected United States Senator and served from 1891 to 1897.

General James Longstreet prospered for a time after the war; then he became a member of the Republican Party and was ostracized by his neighbors. He then published his military autobiography, "From Manassas to Appomattox," which did nothing to endear him to the South. Mrs. McDowell told of a post war incident involving two noted generals—General P. G. T. Beauregard, and General Jubal A. Early of Lynchburg.

Beauregard was completely without funds and was glad to find living quarters in the French Quarter in his home city, New Orleans. The Louisiana Lottery, a very lucrative gambling device which had spread throughout the United States, needed a shot in the arm. Its governing board looked for two distinguished, revered Confederate Generals who would serve as "commissioners" to supervise the drawings and lend dignity to the project. The two generals they had in mind were Beauregard and Early.

The salary offered was $10,000 a year for a few minutes work once a month. These two men were practically penniless. Both Generals were reluctant to take part in the operation. It took much persuading, many letters to convince them. Their financial need finally overcame their scruples. The lottery was recognized by the law of the state, and the Generals had nothing to do with the operation of the institution—the drawings were entirely honest. General Beauregard died in 1893. General Early remained devoted to Lynchburg, and was revered by the Lynchburg people, as was indicated at the time of his death in 1894.

The John G. McCausland Circle, of which Mrs. Evie F. Ewers is chairman, was in charge of the social hour which followed the meeting.

YELLOW ROSE OF TEXAS

There's a yellow rose in Texas that I am going to see,
No other soldier knows her, no soldier,
only me;
She cried so when I left her, it like to
broke my heart,
And if I ever find her, we never more will part.

CHORUS:

She's the sweetest rose of color this soldier ever knew,
Her eyes are bright as diamonds, they
sparkle like the dew;
You may talk about your dearest May and
sing of Rosa Lee,
But the Yellow Rose of Texas beats the belles of Tennessee.

LORENA

The years creep slowly by, Lorena,
The snow is on the grass again;
The sun's low down the sky, Lorena,
The frost gleams where the flow'rs have been.
But the heart throbs on as warmly now,
As when the summer days were nigh;
Oh! -- the sun can never dip so low.
A-down affection's cloudless sky.

Memorial Day

By Raymond Musser

On May 5, 1868, Gen. John A. Logan, Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued a general order to that organization designating May 30 of that year as Memorial Day, "for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country . . ." and expressing "the hope that the observance might be kept up from year to year" to honor the memory of our departed dead.

The idea caught on, and after 104 years, Americans still observe Memorial Day. Where did General Logan of the GAR get this idea for remembering the soldier dead? It is held by some historians that Cassandra Oliver Moncure, a woman of French descent living in Petersburg, Virginia, through the long siege of that city, led other Petersburg women at war's end in placing flowers on the graves of both Confederate and Union soldiers buried in the military cemeteries around the city.

As the story goes, General Logan of the Federal Army was in Petersburg at that time and was impressed by the sight of women decorating soldier graves. When he became head of the GAR three years later he decreed annual observance of May 30 as Decoration Day.

In 1882, upon GAR urging, the name was changed to Memorial Day. By 1910, all the northern and western states and territories had made it a legal holiday; the southern states followed suit by having their own statewide observances. Virginia called it Confederate Memorial Day. Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and Mississippi decorated graves on April 26, the Carolinas on May 10, and Louisiana and Tennessee on June 3 (because that was Jefferson Davis' birthday). Even in this year 1972 Grier's Almanac calls April 26 Southern Memorial Day.

When Congress passed its Monday Holiday Bill with Memorial Day weekend one of the three-day holidays, the last Monday in May became officially the national holiday. It is May 29 in 1972 for all Americans.

However Virginians observe Memorial Day and whenever they strew flowers and stick flags, give a warm thought with thanks for those Petersburg women of more than a century ago who started a good thing—honor to the graves of ALL who made the supreme sacrifice at their government's call to colors, in ALL our wars.

Soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines, coast guardsmen, rest in peace!
