Dear Daughters,

I regret not being with you, especially on the auspicious occasion of the celebration of Lee's birthday and a visit from our state president. But I have to be careful as I am liable to take fresh cold upon the slightest provocation and am advised to be cautious about running risks.

If I can escape the winter without another attack of grip, I think I will have more freedom of action.

I wish to thank all for their Christmas greeting which was very gratifying, and brought me in touch with the chapter at that time. I hope each one of you passed a happy season and have a promising outlook for the New Year, with no sick ones to give anxiety. Though January has not been in very good behavior so far, I have the feeling that it is not going to put on worse tricks of weather.

Realizing that it is discouraging to any body of Daughters to be hampered by debt, I sent a check to the treasurer of the Fort Committee fund to reduce the indebtedness a little. I think when the chapter is free of that obligation it will take new life in starting fresh work, where there are now many calls for cooperation. Here's wishing that day may not be far away. To one and all a happy issue in what you undertake.

Very sincerely

Ruth H. Early.

LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA

My Dear Mrs. De Witt: —

Yrs. Wd. Swauer
have been answered, but for my son's illness — He has had bronchial pneumonia — & is very poorly.

"The Real Lincoln" is, as you know, not the expression of the Author's opinion. It is in the main made up of extracts & excerpts from written documents, books or letters of those who knew Mr. Lincoln — in the flesh, — his law partners; his Cabinet members & others who were intimately associated with him — So it is not a presentation of a prejudiced Southern view-point at all — It is a valuable book in the light of the myth which has grown up about Lincoln, fostered by fanatical hero-worshippers —
I am not in sympathy with those who find no good in Mr. L — Nor am I in sympathy with those who wd. make a God of him —

In fact, I think he is that analogy in history, — same good & same bad
wt. we must look for in most of our flesh — He was certainly a remarkable man in some respects, considering his origin & —
I do think that in the Va Div. we have one who is inclined to carry the idea too far, & heaping execration upon Mr. L — I do not feel that true hist is ever served by this method — But as you say, by informing ourselves of the truth —
Therefore read "The Real Lincoln"
but always with an open mind —
Yours haste
M. H. T.

Funeral Tomorrow
For Local Author

Miss Ruth Early Dies At Hospital After Illness Of Eight Months

Funeral services will be held at the home, 127 Harrison street, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock for Miss Ruth M. Early, widely known writer on historic subjects, whose death occurred yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at Virginia Baptist Hospital. She had been ill for eight months with arthritis, and her condition had been critical for more than a week.

Miss Early was born in Charleston, W. Va., November 5, 1849, her parents being Samuel Henry Early and Mrs. Henrietta Cabell Early the latter a native of this city. She was a niece of the late General Jubal A. Early, of Confederate army fame and was the last survivor of her own family. Her nearest surviving relatives are Major C. C. Early, U. S. A., and Misses Evelyn and Henrietta Early, who reside in Washington.

In many societies, Miss Early had been prominently mentioned for many years with the colonial dames, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of the Confederacy and she was a member of the Society of American Pen Women. She was president a number of times of the Old Dominion chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and was representative of the Blue Ridge chapter, D. A. R., in which organizations she always evidenced a keen interest.

She was elected honorary president of Virginia Division, U. D. C., last year and she was an honorary member of Clark-Rodes Camp, U. C. V.

Blue Ridge Chapter, D. A. R., scheduled to meet yesterday, cancelled the meeting on account of Miss Early's illness and the death of E. S. Bowman, bus driver, and Lynchburg chapter, D. A. R., both met and expressed deep regrets at the loss of Miss Early.

It was as a writer, especially along historical and genealogical lines that Miss Early achieved her greatest work, and her contributions to local or Virginia history, are being treasured in the preservation of valuable records and incidents. Her published works include "By-ways of Virginia History," "The Early Family," General Jubal A. Early and "Campbell County Chronicle." It was in compiling facts and making research for material for the last book, a comprehensive volume that her failing health was more seriously impaired, its publication finding her ill.

The preservation of the history of this section was her absorbing interest, and probably no other person has been more instrumental in having down to posterity the history of Lynchburg and Campbell county.

Erected Early Monument
Miss Early held to the faith of the Seaboarder's organization, being probably the only adherent to that faith in Lynchburg. She erected the Early monument to her late uncle, General Jubal A. Early, near one of the land marks of the city. This is located at the intersection of Fort and Memorial avenues and is opposite the old Lynchburg fort, from which forces under the command of General Early assisted in the defense of the city during the Civil War.

Miss Early made her home for many years at 127 Harrison street, which home was long noted for its hospitality and for a keen interest in historical and civic affairs of the city, the state and the world.

"As a niece of that distinguished Confederate general, Jubal A. Early, whose valor and military genius adorned the cause for which he fought, and among whose greatest exploits was the defeat and utter rout of the vanguard of the Union army at Lynchburg, and whom he drove unopposedly to the banks of the Ohio river, she might have quietly rested content in the reflected glory of his great fame, but such was not the stuff of which she was made. In her own right, and by the exercise of her own great talents and energy, she won distinction for herself and added lustre to her family name. Sprung from aristocratic southern lineage, Ruth Hairston Early, the third child of Captain Samuel Henry Early, and Henrietta Cabell, his wife, and was born in Charleston, Virginia (now West Virginia) November 5, 1849. Most of her life was spent in Lynchburg and Campbell county, and to this section and community she devoted her energies in public spirited and unflinching zeal towards its upbuilding and welfare."

Made Faithful Research
The preservation of its history was her most absorbing interest, and to no one else was more indebted than to her for faithful research and accurate recording of its notable events. As a writer of historical articles and books she brought to light and set down in permanent form much of the traditional and family lore of this region which might otherwise have been lost. Many valuable records and historical incidents have been preserved through her efforts, and in the field of history especially her work has been fruitful and interesting. She was author of four books which are treasured and referred to by many biographers and genealogists country over. These books

TABLET TO MISS

Judge Don P. Halsey Delivers
Address At Exercises Yesterday at Cemetery

MRS. FLOURNOY HAS PRAISE Characterized Miss Early As
"Outstanding Woman Of The U. D. C."

A bronze tablet to the memory of Miss Ruth Hairston Early was unveiled at Spring Hill cemetery yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in a ceremony held by Old Dominion chapter, U. D. C., of which Miss Early was founder. Mrs. E. B. Wiggin, chairman of the committee which arranged the memorial and the exercises, presented the tablet from the memorial committee to Mrs. R. C. Shumate, president of the chapter. Mrs. Shumate then presented the speakers, the principal address being made by Judge Don P. Halsey.

Misses Evelyn and Henrietta Early unveiled the tablet at the end of the ceremony. Mrs. William Cabell Flournoy, state historian, characterized Miss Early as "the outstanding woman of the U. D. C." Mrs. James A. Scott prepared a paper which Mrs. John W. Childs read because Mrs. Scott was called out of town. Frances McCree played a waltz from the Children of the Confederacy.

Invocation was offered by Rev. Thomas M. Brown and the band of the 24th artillery played and sounded taps. Color bearers were escorted from troop 12, of Fore Hill.

Judge Halsey spoke in part as follows:
Exemplifies Traditions
"It is eminently fitting and proper that on this 33rd anniversary of the Old Dominion chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy should place and dedicate this tablet to its founder. In doing so it pays honor to one who was not only active in its work and in the promotion of its principles, but one who also exemplified the finest traditions of southern womanhood, and who spent her life in brave and unselfish service to her community and her state."

Ways of Virginia history. "The Early Family," "General Jubal A. Early," and her last elaborate and exhaustive volume, "Campbell Chronicle," in the compilation of which her health suffered serious impairment, and brought about a condition from which she never rallied and which resulted in her death soon after its publication. In spite of minor inaccuracies, such as are inevitable in a work of this character, this book is of inestimable value in its thorough and painstaking review of the principal historic data of Lynchburg and Campbell county, and will always remain an important source of information to those who in the future shall desire to know the history of the community and its people.

"As a member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, she rendered service of incalculable value to its cause. Through her efforts the Old Dominion chapter was formed and organized, and to her indelible efforts it owes many of its worthy achievements. For six terms she held the office of its president, and up to her death was active in all its affairs. She was prominent also in the state and national organizations, and held office in the Virginia division as honorary president, vice-president, corresponding secretary and historian. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that she was loved and honored not only by her fellow members of the useful and patriotic organization, but by the Confederate veterans and all who love the memory of the Confederacy, and that she was always a central and distinguished figure at the annual reunions, which she always attended, and where she would always be surrounded by admirers and friends. When she died, the flags of Lynchburg were placed at half mast, the first, and so far, the only instance in which this honor has been accorded to a woman."

"Always interested in the preservation of historical landmarks, it was largely through her efforts that the old fort on 'Saint Turpin's' was rescued from its tangled undergrowth and placed as now it is, and it was she who erected the Early monument on Fore Hill. She was active also in the Colonial Revolution, and served them in official capacities. Her home was attractive in its liberal hospitality, and she was a notable and outstanding figure in the life of our city. Faithful to all that was best in Virginia tradition, kindly and benevolent in nature and of exalted purity of character, she leaves behind the memory of a life well spent, and an example worthy of all emulation."

Memorial Exercises For Miss Early Held Sunday; Judge Halsey Speaker

Pouring rain did not prevent a large assemblage from gathering at the grave of Miss Ruth Hairston Early in Spring Hill cemetery Sunday afternoon to pay tribute to her memory. In exercises sponsored by Old Dominion Chapter, U. D. C., in which was unveiled a bronze tablet erected in her honor, the principal address being made by Judge Don P. Halsey of the circuit court of Campbell county and Lynchburg.

The tablet bore the following inscription: "Dedicated to the memory of Ruth Hairston Early, founder of Old Dominion Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, June 23, 1896. Six terms its president. Honorary president vice-president, corresponding secretary and historian, Virginia Division, U. D. C. Placed by Old Dominion Chapter, U. D. C., June 23, 1929." The memorial committee was headed by Mrs. E. B. Wiggins, who presented the tablet in a few words of ringing tribute to Miss Early. Mrs. C. R. Shumate, president of the chapter, recognized the gift and presiding at the meeting. The tablet was unveiled by Misses Evelyn and Henrianna Early, nieces of Miss Ruth H. Early and together with a nephew, Major C. C. Early, her nearest surviving kin.

Scouts Have Part.

The military units of the city and the Boy Scouts assisted in the service, the 246th Coast Guard Band, composed of members of the military company and of the E. C. Glass High School orchestra, with instruments belonging to the school and lent also by one of the Lynchburg dealers, making a splendid contribution to the program with several selections played under the direction of G. A. Klueber. Three scouts from Troop 12, of Fort Hill, P. W. McWane, Jr., Dwight Rivers and George Robeson were color bearers, holding Confederate flags which also decked the square in tribute to Miss Early and to her father and uncle who were gallant officers of the Confederacy. Miss Frances McGehee of the Children of the Confederacy, placed at the base of the monument a large memorial wreath presented the chapter for the occasion, recognizing the special interest Miss Early felt in the development of the children's work.

Mrs. William Cabell Flournoy, of Glasgow and Lexington, state historian of the Virginia Division, expressed approval of the chapter's action in establishing a precedent which other organizations should follow in honoring women who are leaders in the work of the organization and spoke of Miss Ruth Early as being an outstanding woman in innumerable lines of endeavor.

Mrs. James A. Scott, former president of the Virginia Division, prepared a tribute to Miss Early which was read by Mrs. John W. Childs after Mrs. Scott was called out of the city by the death of a friend in Richmond. Attributes of character exemplified in the life of Miss Early were praised and her work as a member of the organization which paid her special honor yesterday and as belonging to various other patriotic and historic societies was complimented.

southern womanhood, and who spent her life in brave and unselfish service to her community and her state.

"As a niece of that distinguished Confederate general, Jubal A. Early, whose valor and military genius adorned the cause for which he fought, and among whose greatest exploits was the defeat and utter rout of the vanguard Hunter, when he undertook to capture and destroy our fair city of Lynchburg, and whom he drove ingloriously to the banks of the Ohio river, she might have quietly rested content in the reflected glory of his great fame; but such was not the stuff of which she was made. In her own right, and by the exercise of her own great talents and energy, she won distinction for herself and added lustre to her family name. Sprung from aristocratic southern lineage, Ruth Hairston Early, the third Ruth and the second Ruth Hairston of the family of Early, was the third child of Captain Samuel Henry Early, and Henrianna Cabell, his wife, and was born in Charleston, Virginia (now West Virginia) November 5, 1840. Most of her life was spent in Lynchburg and Campbell county, and to this section and community she devoted her endeavors in public spirit, and un-throughout. In addition to committee of which Mrs. Wiggins was chairman, associated committees were headed by Mrs. C. L. DeMott, Miss Beale Long, Mrs. C. H. Almond, Mrs. J. R. Atwood, Mrs. Richard Booth and Mrs. Crawley Williams. The flag used for the unveiling was used at the first Memorial day exercises held in Virginia after the War Between the States and belongs to Mrs. J. R. Atwood.

The invocation was offered by Rev. Thomas M. Browne of St. John's Episcopal Church and taps were sounded by a member of the band. Confederate Veterans of Garland-Rodes Camp braved the rain and a representative crowd, including members of patriotic organizations officially designated to be present and scores of personal friends of Miss Early and her family attended the ceremonies.

Judge Halsey said in part:
Exemplifies Traditions
"It is eminently fitting and proper that on this 33rd anniversary of its existence the Old Dominion Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy should place and dedicate this tablet to its founder. In doing so it pays honor to one who was not only great in its work and in the promotion of its principles, but one who also exemplified the finest traditions of

Mrs. Wiggins recalled that the chapter was formed June 23, 1896, thirty-three years ago, by 43 women called together by Miss Early, and she spoke of the fact that the day and hour at which the meeting Sunday was held were in accord with those upon which the chapter was organized. The ar-

OLD-TIME CONFEDERATES

(Sung to the tune of "Old-Time Religion")

We are a band of brothers,
We are a band of brothers,
A band of Southern brothers,
Who fought for liberty.

CHORUS:

We're old-time Confederates,
We're old-time Confederates,
We're old-time Confederates,
They're good enough for me.

Jeff Davis was our leader,
Our chosen leader,
Our true and faithful leader:
He was good enough for me.

Lee and Johnston our chieftains,
Bragg, Beauregard, and Johnston,
These were glorious chieftains,
They were good enough for me.

We followed Stonewall Jackson,
The Christian soldier Jackson,
The terror-striking Jackson,
He was good enough for me.

We fought with Hood and Gordon,
With Longstreet, Polk, and Cleburne,
With Ewell Hill and Hardee,
They were good enough for me.

We rode with Stuart and Hampton,
With Fitz Lee, Duke and Morgan,
With Forrest and Joe Wheeler,
They were good enough for me.

We wore ourselves out fighting,
We wore ourselves out fighting,
We wore ourselves out fighting
For Southern liberty.

Now our country is united,
Now our country is united,
Now our country is united:
It's good enough for me.

We must all meet in heaven,
We must all meet in heaven,
We must all meet in heaven
To rejoice eternally.
